

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing in response to the challenge by the Consumer Bankers Association to the Indiana "No Call" law.

As a resident of the state, I can not explain how pleasant it is not to have the interruptions of unsolicited phone calls. I have a high stress job with constant noise and phone calls. My home should be a place to escape from the work a day world. Since the institution of the no call law here in Indiana that is exactly what my home has become. By considering the request of the CBA you are opening the residents of this state that participate in the no call to unsolicited calls. If I wish goods or services from a bank, even my own bank, I will certainly contact them. If I wish a credit card, I will contact that institution. I do not want nor need for them to contact me.

Please be considerate of the residents of Indiana. Ask the people of the state if they are happy with the current legislation and I think you will get a resounding YES! Don't let the financial interests of big banking infringe of the happiness of the people of Indiana.

Sincerely,

Rebecca Moffett
